The 2024 BMI Prize

Vision

The world is thirsty for innovative, groundbreaking policy solutions to promote environmental sustainability, ensure food security, health and energy to all, and eradicate poverty, inequality and international conflict. The Boris Mints Institute (BMI) was founded with the intention to encourage research, planning and innovative thinking to promote significant positive change in the world. BMI's mission is to find strategic feasible solutions and innovative projects to enhance the welfare of communities around the globe.

Starting 2017, BMI awards a $100,000 prize to an exceptional researcher who has devoted his/her research and academic life to the solution of a strategic global challenge and whose research public action and ideas had transformative impacts on global policy formation, as well as a proven contribution to the welfare of a significant number of communities worldwide.

The previous prize laureates were Professor Jeffrey Sachs of Columbia University, Professor Michael Kremer of Harvard University (who won the Nobel Prize in 2019), Dr. Peter Gleick of the Pacific Institute in California, Professor Sabina Alkire of Oxford University, Dr. John N. Nkengasong of CDC Africa and Prof. Robert Axelrod of the University of Michigan.

The 2024 BMI Prize

The BMI Prize for 2024 will be presented to an outstanding academic figure who has significantly contributed, both academically and practically, to the study of authoritarianism and its return as a global challenge.

Nominations to the prize will be evaluated through an independent review process by a panel of renowned international experts. Prize evaluation will focus on the nominee's academic background, public activities and vision. The BMI Prize is granted according to merit, without discrimination based on gender, race, religion, nationality, or political affiliation.

The prize will be transferred to a research institute or body according to the Prize winner's choice.

Entries must meet the following criteria

- Winning the BMI Prize requires a substantial body of academic work of a considerable volume.
- The nominee's academic and applied contribution must fit within the aforementioned topic. The nominee's work both demonstrates a clear perception of the 'big-picture' and focuses on practical and applicable solutions to the challenge.
- The nominee's work transcended the academic world to the sphere of public action.
- The academic and public efforts had a transformative impact on global policy.

The Evaluation Process

Nominations to the prize will be evaluated through an independent review process by a panel of renowned international experts and policy makers. The Recommendation of the evaluation committee will be submitted to the approval of Dr. Mints by Professor Itamar Rabinovitch, Former Ambassador of Israel to the U.S., President Emeritus of Tel Aviv University, and Senior Member of the International Advisory Board of BMI, and Professor Itai Sened, Head of BMI and Dean of the Faculty of Social Sciences.
