The 2024 BMI Prize – Call for Proposals

The Boris Mints Institute was founded with the intention to encourage research, planning and innovative thinking to promote significant positive change in the world. BMI is focusing on finding strategic feasible solutions to provide strategic plans and innovative projects to enhance the welfare of communities around the globe.

Starting 2017, BMI awards a $100,000 prize to an exceptional individual who has devoted his/her research and academic life to the solution of a strategic global challenge, and whose research public action and ideas had transformative impacts on global policy formation and a proven contribution to the welfare of a significant number of communities worldwide.

The BMI Prize for 2024 will be presented to an outstanding academic figure who has significantly contributed, both academically and practically, to the study of authoritarianism and its return as a global challenge.

Nominations to the prize will be evaluated through an independent review process by a panel of renowned international experts. Prize evaluation will focus on the nominee's academic background, public activities and vision.

The deadline for submission of nominations is April 15th, 2024
